

Turabian Style Handout

This guide is meant to provide basic examples of Turabian citation style. For a more extensive understanding of Turabian citation, ask a CTX Librarian for assistance or consult:

- Turabian: The Easy Way! by Houghton and Houghton: LB2369 .H69 2009

Each example below is given first in footnote or endnote style (note [N]) and then in bibliography style (entry [B]). In bibliographies, authors are listed with last name first. If a work has no author, start the citation with the work's title. They are alphabetized A-Z, and listed using the paragraph style of "hanging indent." Notes are generally numbered. If you use MSWord, the Reference tool will ensure that changes/deletions/additions are kept in order for you automatically.

Shortened form in subsequent notes after a complete entry when first noted.

The first reference to a citation must contain all bibliographic information.

1. Robert McGhee, The Last Imaginary Place: A Human History of the Arctic World (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), 197.

Subsequent references can use a shortened form. Some writers use ibid. (abbreviation for Latin ibidem, meaning "in the same place") to shorten a citation for a work whose bibliographical data appear in the immediately previous note. In addition, there are two acceptable forms of a shortened reference:

2. McGhee, 188.
2. McGhee, Last Imaginary Place, 188.
